"BET YOUR LIFE."

She walked up to the alter, Arrayed in spotless white; She did not quail nor falter, Her step was firm, yet light. When the question was propounded, "Will you prove a loving wife;" With clearness her voice scanded, As she answered, "Bet your life."

ADVICE TO BOYS.

DY CHARLES IL DARRETT. You may wish for this, You may wish for that, And wish for fruits of the seil, Mark it down a Saxon truth,

If you would have this, If you would have that, And have it all secure, Accept it as a simple fact, Knowledge you must procure If you have saved this,

If you have saved that, And it is all your own, You deserve all the credit To be not a rolling stone If you work for this, If you work for that.

And labor with a will, The result will be succe And men will note your skill. You may read this book, You may read that book, But read the better kind:

You must read a useful book, Or you're only wasting time. You may drink this glass, You may drink that gla Till you quench the liquor crave; Forget not that in the end

You'll all a drunkard's grave You may go this way, You may go that way, You may go from door to door; Without God's love in your heart, The devil will get you sure

A SAMPLE SORGHUM.

The thumpty-thumpty of an overgrown fist
Was heard at the editor's door,
And the overworked, petulant journalist hissed, "I'll wager my head that's a bore!" And the farmer approached in a gingerly style The man who instructed the masses, And placed in his hand, with a satisfied smile, A vial of sorghum molasses

"I reckon you newspaper fellers," he said, "Hev never been foundered on sich,
And you think yourselves high to even get bread.
And deny yourselves things that is rich.
Well, it burt me to think of your suffering here For a change in your regular diet, And I thought if you'd send me your paper a year I'd give you the sorghum to try it.

"And of course," he continued, "you'll give puff In the paper that comes out to-day— A column, I reckon, will be 'bout cuca And I recken you'll know what to say. I made them moinsees myself, you must know, And my name is Ezekiel Seevers.**— Here he leaned out of the window and twice sho

To a thin yoke of heart-broken steers. Then the editor, setting the sorghum aside, Arose from his chair with a sigh, And he said, "It is true, and it can't be denied, And your great generosity, equalled by naught Save your modesty melts me to tears."
(Here the man took a bite from some cheese bought And shouted again at his steers.)

And the writer continued, "The Times' for a year And a puff of a column or two Would be but a feeble exchange, sir, I fear, For this scorghum, deliciously blue; So, accept of the office, my friend, if you please; This he work of a number of years"— This the work of a number of years."

Here the hasbandman nibbled again at his And shouted once more to his steers.)

"The office is yours," said the scribe,

They are all I can offer you now Your favor looms over them both, I confess, Like a mountain range over a cow. And I'll give up my chair, you shall take it in And instruct and collection the masses, ; While I vary my regular diet of brend With this vial of surgham melasses?

The Courage of Conviction.

Topeka, Capital. Senator John Sherman is an old man in the sense that his convictions are so much a part of him, that when he gives expression to them he puts out to the people a part of his very nature. In his Olijo canyass he stroke deliberately of the sense that his convictions are so last winter I will have good shelter for my stock." Some of these parties up to this time have made no preparations to shelter their stock, and the cold winds

"Not only your newspapers, but the distin-guished gentleman who is the democratic candidate for governor of the state of Virginia, has said to you that I was wav-ing the bloody shirt while he was con-tending under the union flag," said Mr. Sherman to the people of Petersburg-fle added:

"If he meant by waving the bloody shirt that I sought in any way to renew the an-imosities of the war, then he was greatly mistaken, for in the speech to which he refers, and in every speech I made in Ohio, I constantly said that the war was over and the animosities of the war should be buried out of eight, that I would not hold any confederate soldier responsible point, condected with the aid of the most compete for what he did during the war, and that writers obtainable. All who do so are not logically bound to prevail in undertakings. We desire our progressive and retail, at Caddick's. readers to profit by these criticisms. The grammatical construction of sentences must be learned in textbooks; rhetorical congruity, through careful reading. An example from this article:

"And although she has chosen the edu-

Works are not trodden, properly. "Than she" is redundant, superfluons—besides doubtful as to expendence of the day that the walk. she" is redundant, superfluons—besides doubtful as to correctness. "Than whom none higher sat," from Milton, may sug-gest the objective form. Another error from the same paper rans: "The Indian and tomahawk, the ruffian

Factors and fabric do not appear in the same relation; the first requires product; the last, thread, woof or web. Let no pupil neglect the study of language. To you grammar is a dull study, because you are not sharp, keen, to cut a bright way through it. If you close your gram-mar, close your mouth. Remember that nearly ever sentence you utter or hear contains a disfigured, mutilated, murdered word. Until you master grammar your words are so many witnesses testi-fying to your horrible slaughter of innocent parts of speech.

Against the Republican Party.

Atchison Champion.

The article, "We Don't Want You," from the Leavenworth Times, will bear rending. Probably some of the Times' references are intended to have a local rather than a general significance, but much that the Times says is calculated much that the Times says is calculated for every latitude. Republicans may as well understand that their party, from this out, will have whisky to fight. A A good many republicans have wished to avoid this fight, but they are in for it now. Every saloon, every hole-in the-wall, is against the Republican party in Kansas. As this fact becomes clearer men will take sides "for keeps." All who are from policy, lack of moral sense, the force of habit, or other cause for whisky will go to the Democratic party; all who are against whisky will go to the Republican party. The struggle may be arduous and against whisky will go to the Republican party. The struggle may be arduous and uncertain, but whisky will beat any party, just as it will beat any individual, and at the end of some hard-fought political battle in the future the Demoratic party will be found dead on the field with a broken and stopperless jug beside its lifeless form.
